Chairman's Note

The maiden things that happen to be pleasant are forever relished. But relishing alone is not enough, as they are not dished out to us in a platter. We earn them through unflagging efforts and consistent toil and meticulous trial. To this end, the first session of Reader Grammar School (RGS) is not just a ripple in the pond; it is a ground-grinding, barrier-bashing and a block-busting event. It is the practical translation of our optimistic City elites, who taking into account our thunderous success at College level have motivated and inspired us to unveil the curtain of our school side with unchartered crests of academic glitter and glamour.

As our tradition has it, the newly-hatched progressive and enterprising institution (RGS) shall keep on providing our students with the most sought-after angular academic dose of 360 degree technique with a dash of friendly and responsive environment, allowing them to nourish and flourish academically and personally.

I believe your time with us will not all be spent on your academic pursuits through number crunching or frog-to-

we believe that all our students
imbibe in them the novel instructional skills, develop

Assessment Criteria

Assessment criteria are crucial in establishing a clear understanding between staff and students about what is expected from assessed work.

They should specify clearly the standards that must be met and what evidence will be used to show achievement of learning outcomes.

They help staff to ensure consistency in the ways that they assess specific pieces of work and provide students with a clear sense of why they have received certain marks for their work and what they need to do to improve.

They should be shared with students and, where necessary, explained to them.

Many students do not feel confident or able to interpret assessment criteria on their own and often the grading process can seem very mysterious. Clear and specific assessment criteria can be extremely effective in helping students improve their performance and to feel confident in their learning.
